Celebrate Life Int'l hosts reception at new headquarters location

New location gives CLI more visibility and flexibility

Atlanta, GA, December 2, 2010 -- Celebrate Life International, the creators of the Teach One to Lead One® philosophy, hosted a reception for volunteers and investors at its new headquarter offices in Metro Atlanta and thanked businesses and individuals who made it possible for the organization to occupy the beautiful new facilities.

After 11 years at its previous location, the organization decided to move to the new facility when a long-time supporter offered to subsidize part of the lease in one of his company's office buildings; the offices are owned by Classic Elias Properties, LLC. Many other supporters joined this project and helped in many different capacities. Nationwide Integrators, Inc. also joined in this project by donating the installation of all telephone equipment and electronic building security. Pastor Nathan Nielson, senior pastor of Town Center Community Church, offered a heart-felt prayer of dedication for the new offices at the well-attended reception.

"We couldn't have made this happen without the help of such committed friends and supporters. The new offices are great and will greatly help in our mission to reach kids who are in trouble not only in our city but around the country and the world," said Dr. Lori Salierno, Founder and CEO of Celebrate Life International (CLI).

CLI will continue its aggressive roll-out of the new and improved Teach One to Lead One® program from its new offices as it enters into the new year. Public school administrators and juvenile court authorities from counties across the U.S. have been requesting the organization's programs. The new facility will help the CLI staff provide a faster turn-around to those requesting support since it has now consolidated all of its materials and most of the staff in one location.
